

The hidden crisis of burnout in non-profit spaces - call in support now (<https://www.activelink.ie/node/108356>)

It is costing your organisation time and money and it is reducing your effectiveness towards your service users.

If you or your front line workers are feeling exhausted and burnt out. Or if you are losing the passion that initially brought you to working in this sector:

Then consider supporting yourself and your team with external leadership support, reflective practice and professional coaching. So that you can all thrive, do your best work and provide quality support to your stakeholders and service users.

With 20 years experience of supporting transitions, change and challenging situations in the non profit and public sectors as well as training, coaching and professional support, I understand the challenges and the ever changing landscape. I also know the passion that you have working in this sector and want to bring that back for you and your teams.
