

Launch of 'Gardening for Bats' Project Resources (<https://www.activelink.ie/node/113275>)

GARDENING FOR BATS - support bats in your own backyard!

Do you want to know how you can support bats in your own back garden, through bat friendly gardening practices?

In this free special online event, Bat Conservation Ireland will introduce our new resources on how to make your garden more bat friendly and our panel of experts will introduce you to examples of what they did in their own outdoor spaces, to make them more bat friendly and help answer your questions.

GARDENING FOR BATS

We are delighted to launch our Gardening for Bats project - support bats in your own backyard!

Project Background: The project came from a question we are often asked by members of the public 'What can I do for bats?'.

The truth is, there is a lot anyone with an outdoor space can easily do for bats. With this project, we aim to:

- Create resources for gardeners to help them make bat and wildlife-friendly decisions when gardening.
- Provide signage, printed materials and resources for garden centres to help customers choose bat friendly trees, hedging and herbaceous perennials, as well as ponds and other features.
- For Irish plant nurseries - provide 'I'm bat friendly' labelling for Irish grown, native hedging and tree stock, as well as labels for herbaceous perennials that support nocturnal pollinators.

Learn more about this project and how to get involved, by joining us for a special online event where we will introduce our new resources and answer all your wildlife gardening questions, with the help of our panel of experts.
